The Flings at Pennsylvania's Military Made by New York Papers Taken Up in Eurnest by the Legislature-Governor Benver Calls a Halt-Mr. Wherry Denies That His Anti-Discrimination Bill is a Mere Political Bodge-Important Homicide Cases Coming Before the Board of Pardons To-Day- A Mysterious Visit to

The National Guard of Pennsylvania will attend the inauguration centennial in New York as the guests of the Centennial Committee, in spite of all the opposition, raised principally by some New York papers. Mr. Wherry's friends repel the assertion that his anti-discrimination bill was introduced merely as a political dodge. A mysterious mission leaves Harrisburg to call on Colonel Quay.

PSPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH!

HARRISBURG, April 15.-In the wild rush for special orders to-night, the House was sufficiently liberal to grant 16, the most important among them being the street railway bill, for which Mr. Capp obtained a special order, and Mr. Fow's liquor license transfer bill, for which that centleman obtained a special order. The street railway bill is an incorporation measure, but is designedly displeasing to the friends of Mr. Magee in some respects. It is something that was badly needed, and if everybody isn't suited many will be. Mr. Fow's transfer bill provides simply for the transfer of liquor licenses to the legal heirs of a deceased person, if residents of the same county and of good moral character.

Where a Breeze Was Raised. Another resolution that threatened to raise something of a breeze was one introduced by Mr. Bentley of Erie, for the recall from the Governor of the resolution providing for the participation of the Legislature, accompanied by the Governor and his stuff, in the New York centennial cele-

Dr. Walk, of Philadelphia, supported the move in a speech in which he said that when the House passed the resolution, early in the session, it did not know that it would be so far behind with its work at this time, with the date o adjournment so close. Neither did it know that money would be so short in the Treasury. It knew all this now, and the doctor thought in view of it the best way to honor George Washington was by following his example. The guiding stars of Washington's life, the doctor said, were patriotism and duty. A Good Iden to Stny at Home.

Other speakers on this side were Messrs. Kauffman and Lytle. The former thought, in view of the fuss the New York papers are making about the maintenance of the Pennsylvania National Guard, the invited guests of the city, that it would be a good idea for the Legislature to stay at home and give the $15,000 or $20,000, estimated as the expenses of the Legislative trip, to the soldier boys, to support them while guests of Gotham.

The question was yet under debate when the hour of 10 o'clock arrived, and Mr. Keyser demanded the order of the day, which was adjournment. This disposes of the recall resolution until next week, and by the time it is again in order the resolution to go to New York will have been approved or vetoed by the Governor, or will have become a law without his signature.

Governor Benver Calls a Halt.

Chairman Dearden, of the Appropriations Committee, in view of the objection raised by the New York papers about the maintenance of the Pennsylvania National Gnard during the celebration, had intended to-night to introduce a bill approprinting a sufficient sum to pay the expenses of the trip, but a telegram from Governor Beaver, who was at Tyrone, induced him to withhold it until he can confer with the Governor and Adjutant General Hastings to-morrow.

General Hastings arrived to-night and said there was no need of an appropriation bill to pay for subsistence of the State troops in New York. The invitation sent him by the committee was hearty and cordial, and included an offer of both quarters and subsistence. He says the talk indulged in does not come from the committee, but is wholly a newspaper matter. The troops will go to New York City as the guests o the Centennial Committee, and, General Hastings says, will be heartily welcomed as the New York troops were by Philadelphia during her Centennial. The Junction Railway Eminent Domale Bill Not Quite Killed.

NOT A POLITICAL DODGE.

Mr. Wherry's Bill Long a Matter of Serious Consideration by Him.

[FROM A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.] HARRISBURG, April 15 .- Mr. Wherry o-night repudiated charges made in an Eastern paper that his bill had been introduced so late in the session as to be a mere and Senator Brown's bill, in order to sustain the position he had taken that Mr. Senate had virtually killed one measure merely to make a little political capital.

Mr. Wherry made no reply to this.

A prominent Republican member stated THE DISPATCH correspondent that Mr. Wherry had been in consultation with him about anti-discrimination a long time be-fore the introduction of the bill which in principle was what the Republicans had edged themselves to support. It is stated on authority to-night that the railroad commission bill will not be taken up by the Republican leaders.

John Jackson, President of the St. Louis Elevator Company, is still the leading topic on 'Change, and the air is filled with rumors as to the eauses leading up to the tragic event, From Dr. Samuel Brackett, Mr. Jackson's physician, it was learned to day that his suicide was not an impulse, for he had frequently discussed with the doctor various methods of self-destruction. At the opening of "Change this morning the prom-ised pance in wheat failed to materialize. During the morning quite a stir was caused by inquiries from Chicago as to the amount e the Third National Bank by Mr. Jack

SOLVED A MYSTERY.

The Body of Miss Fairweather Found in an Ohio Creek-A French Teacher, Long Missing, Who Had Evi-dently Committed Suicide.

PEPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.] COLUMBUS, O., April 15 .- The mysterious disappearance of Miss Suzanne Fairweather, November 9, last, from the residence of Rev. I. F. King, on Broad street, was solved this evening by the finding of her body in Alum creek, east of the city. The disappearance was a source of much comment at the time, and many theories were advanced. She was a teacher of French in a girl's school in Philadelphia, and has relatives living on Fourth avenue, New York, Prof. Leperrier being

She became acquainted with the daughters of Rev. King at Philadelphia, where she was their teacher, and came here from New York to visit them. She had just previously returned from Paris, where it was reported she had been informed of the loss of a fortune which was in her right. She was despondent while at the King residence, and insisted that she was a burden upon her friends. The search and inquiry for her had been abandoned. A colored man and his wife fishing below the city to-day discovered a body in the brush of a sycamore tree which had fallen into the water. The Coroner was notified and the body taken to his office. It was badly decomposed and the features were un-recognizable. Members of the King family viewed the remains and identified portions of the clothing as those of Miss Fairweather.

They have no doubt as to the identity. A post mortem will be held to-morrow. A large cut in one side of the neck leads to some suspicion, but it is probably the work of the water and debris in which the body has been so long.

There have been no other suicides in the vicinity and no one is missing, as far as known. It was evidently a case of suicide from despendency. Alum creek is the only stream of which Miss Fairweather was informed, and she evidently proceeded direct there on the evening of November 9, when she started out, saying she was going to the

TWO INDIANS WRONGLY TRIED.

The Supreme Court Says They Should Not Have Been Henrd in the U. S. Courts. WASHINGTON, April 15,-The Suprem Court of the United States to-day decided the application of Gon-Shay-Ee, for a writ of habeas corpus, Gon-Shay-Ee, an Apache Indian, was convicted of the murder of another Indian in Arizona, and sentenced to be hanged. He was tried by the District Court of the United States for the Second Judicial District of Arizona. It is contended in his behalf that the offense committed was against the laws of the Territory, and should have been tried under these laws and by a court sitting to administer justice under them, and not by a United States court trying the case under the laws of the United States.

The Court holds that the case would proprely have been tried in the United States Court prior to the passage of the act of March 3, 1885, but by the terms of that act, offenses committed in the Territories by one Indian against another should be tried un-der the Territorial laws. The mode of trial, the Court says, was so much at variance with a trial under Territorial laws as to entitle Gon-Shay-Ee to the writ prayed He was arrested by a United States marshal duced so late in the session as to be a mere political dedge. Mr. Capp then showed the similarity between Mr. Wherry's bill, and Senator Brown's bill, in order to sustain the position he had taken that Mr. Wherry's bill had been introduced after the country in which the offense was committed. He was, says the Court, entitled to trial in the vicinity where the subjected to a change of venue. The Attorney General was requested to see that Gon-Shay-Ee be released under the ruling of the court. The same order was made in the case of Captain Jack, an Indian whose case is substantially the same as that just described, and who was sentenced to 30 years' imprisonment in the Ohio Peni-tentiary, Opinion by Justice Miller, tion of the First Presbyterian Church of this city are in something of a ferment over a sermon preached to them by the pastor, Dr. Byron Sunderland yesterday, in which the reverend gentleman dwelt particularly on the social question. Though he took his text from the Bible, his text in fact was that particular novel by Edward Bellamy entitled "Looking Backward." Many of his large and fashionable congregation had not read the book, but the doctor took good care to explain its contents so that it could not be misuaderstood that it was a radical Socialist work, which a complete programme for a socialistic form of government is depicted in the most attractive style. The doctor emphatically avowed his belief that it would be a society of this kind which would fulfill the promise of the second coming of the Lord, when the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man should be acknowledged and practically illustrated in the form of society.

There is some talk of bringing the doctor before the high court of the church to answer for preaching this revolutionary doc-trine. It is evident that a great majority of his congregation will stand by him, as there are many socialists of a mild type among them, and many who are not of that faith admit that Bellamy's book maps out an admirable, though, as they think, a chimerical plan for the regeneration of society. Sunderland was the pastor of Mrs. Cleve-land, and President Cleveland attended his church also. He has always been known as a preacher of liberal views and learless in the expression of his opinions.

With Only a Little Bunch of Bright Red Roses and a Plain Gold Ring.

Love laughs at caste once more. The belle of aristocracy in Providence, R. L, becomes desperately enraptured with the son of a poor mechanic. Miss King that was, is the possessor of a quarter of a million dollars, with several millions to come, and her husband, George McLeod, has a fair education, but no money. Both are very young-the groom 21, his bride a trifle older. The marriage has just taken place, and was a clandestine one.

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.] PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 15 .- The belle Providence aristocracy, an heiress with $250,000 in her own name and millions in rospective, has eloped with the son of a mechanic, and the Providence "Four Hundred" are duzed with the knowledge that the richest eligible youths were cut out by one whose claims to social prominence were too small to be considered.

Mr. George McLeod, a Brown University student, is the fortunate youth, and Miss Fredona King is the bride. Last Friday night they procured a license, drove to the house of the Congregational minister in East Providence, and in a few minutes they were married. Then they started on an extensive wedding journey, leaving no word as to when they should return for forgive-

They were the crew of the schooner Effort, which was aban-

John Albert Bright, the son of the great Commoner, was yesterday elected to Parliament for the seat made vacant by his father's death. The Liberals made a vigorous fight, but sentiment was too strong for them. The Samoan Commission has been completed by the appointment of the English and German representatives. There is still a protest at Berlin over the selection of the American contingent.

LONDON, April 15 .- The contest for the seat in Parliament for Central Birmingham, made vacant by the death of John Bright ended to-day in a very decisive manner, it not altogether as was anticipated by a few very sanguine Liberals. John Bright sat as one of the members for Birmingham in the Liberal interest from August, 1857, until the division of the borough in 1885 by the new reform act. He then offered himself as the Liberal candidate for Central Birmingham and was opposed by Lord Randolph Churchill.

It was a daring thing for Lord Churchill to do, but he made a dashing canvass, ably supported by his American wife, the daughter of Larry Jerome, of New York, and the result was a surprise. The total registration was 10,923 and the vote cast 9,205, which was more than the average proportion of voting to registration. In this large vote Mr. Bright received but 773 majority. In the election of 1886 Mr. Bright presented himself as a Unionist Liberal, in opposition to Mr. Gladstone's policy home rule for Ireland.

HIS FATHER'S WALKOVER. He was a leader in the Liberal secession from Gladstone's following and made a strong speech at Birmingham against the home rule bill. At Mr. Gladstone's earnest request no attempt to contest Central Bir-mingham in the straight Liberal interest was made, and of course there was no Tory can-didate. John Bright had a walkover. To-day the fight was between the Unionist Liberal and Tory alliance headed by a son of John Bright and the Gladstone Liberals headed by William Phipson Beale, a lawyer, who in 1885 unsuccessfully contested the Tamworth division in the Liberal inter-

Mr. Bale is a Birmingham man by birth and family connections as well as Mr. John A. Bright, but the latter had the advantage of his father's strong hold on the affections of his old constituents. The Conservatives of the constituencies represented by Unionist Liberals have been very restive at being kept in the background, and especially at being refused a candidate of their own faith at away vacancy occurring. On the death-of John Bright the Central Birmingham Conservatives insisted on being reorganized, and invited Lord Randelph itated John Bright's son announced himself He was sent after Smith and followed him a candidate as a Unionist Liberal. Mr. Beale having been chosen as the Gladston Liberal candidate, there was a prospect of a triangular fight and a Gladstone victory.

A GOVERNMENT OBJECTION. The government interfered, strong press sure was put upon Lord Churchill and he withdrew. An open rupture of the alliance was thus prevented, but Conservatives are angry Unionist Liberals distr pressure was so strong, however, that factions pulled together to-day, and used every effort to secure success. The result was that John Albert Bright received 5,610 votes and William Rhipson Beale

While the Gladstone Liberals made an earnest and hopeful fight the result was by no means unexpected. The district is Tory in sympathy, and the election following so soon after John Bright's funeral, it is not ch wonder that his son was success The Conservatives will, however, undoubtedly claim a great victory.

COLUMBUS, O., April 15.—The new city administration took charge of affairs at the organization of the City Council to- in as many different directions, while a night. ELEVEN MEN TOO SCARED TO RUN,

A monkey and parrot time in a New York museum resulted at midnight, over a too uccessful attempt to boom the show for a free "ad" in the afternoon papers. Several valuable animals are now dead-very dead -and the snap is given away.

INPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.1 NEW YORK, April 15 .- Charles Silver Dollar Smith, strolling along Grand street late last evening, intent on a midnight lunch as a refresher after the labor of keeping his silver dollar bar closed all day, was rudely jostled into by a man who emerged, eatapult fashion, from the entrance to the Grand Street Museum. Mr. Smith is a large and placid man, and not likely to be disturbed by a collision with anything less than the whole City Reform Club, but when two other human bolts from the museum catapult had heaped themselves up against him in the space of ten seconds be was moved to make a few casual remarks in a sulphurous tone of voice appropriate to the occasion. By the heads one of the men had said: "Oh, Lord! the bear!" another had grouned, "Gosh! the tiger!" and the third had explained, "Whoo! the wolf!" And all had RUN, ROLLED AND TUMBLED OFF and held, until he eigenlated: "The bear's got loose an's eating the tiger." The bear's got loose an's eating the tiger."

Mr. Smith, not wishing to attend a banquet uninvited, politely refrained from going up to take his luncheon with the bear, and withdrew for a block or two, when, after a while, other men emerged from the mu-seum and seemed in no hurry to get away. Mr. Smith approached again, and learned that the bear had died of indigestion during his meal, and that the tiger was safe in his age. Then Mr. Smith went up to the fifth floor of the museum, and found Il pale-faced men and a dead bear. The bear was very dead indeed It was about the worst clawedap bear imaginable. The tiger, in front of whose cage the dead bear lay, was meditatively licking the blood from its paws and nursing scratched shoul-ders between roars, and the other animals all except a little coyote, over the body of which a leopard was growling.

Most of the eleven present were engaged in recounting to each other, when Mr. Smith entered, the remarkable extent to which they had not been frightened, and the four who had played catapult with Mr. Smith presently came in and remarked that they too had not been scared at all, but had gone her she must die then and there. She knocked the weapon aside and fled into the house. He pursued her to her room, where up rips in his clothing, from his neck to his knees, that covered other scratches, while George Peck, the proprietor of the museum, was limping about trying to get some one to pull his knee into joint again.

After the excitement had somewhat sub-sided Mr. J. O'Neill, the press agent of the show, and a few reporters of the afternoon papers who were present, got together and agreed upon a story of what had happened, a skeleton of which Mr. O'Neill jotted down and had copied for the use of papers whose reporters were not present. LIBERTY OF THE PRESS. In a postseript Mr. O'Neill said: "Please fill in the above skeleton and throw fiery eyes, 'darting tongue,' 'switching tail,' 'howling brutes,' 'flying fur' and gore ad libitum. All the boys will be doing so. Everybody left highly enthused and happy. This appendix got published and was calculated to arouse suspicions that nothing had happened at all, but all the same, things had happened. There are those unkind enough to insinuate that the bear was purposely close in front of the tiger, and that the newspaper men had been invited especially to write up the harmless but exciting little scrimmage that was to result. If so, the scheme worked too well, perhaps. Nobody seems to know, either, how the leopard got at the coyote in the adjoining cage, but the coyote is undoubtedly dead.

The President Highly Enjoys a Six Hours

Before leaving the President received the Chicago and All-American baseball clubs, in the East Room. The reception was very brief, as the party were waiting then to start for the boat. Norfolk for that purpose.

Soon after leaving the wharf the gentlemen of the party ascended to the pilot house, and spent most of the time there until Mt. Vernon was reached. Here the boat slowed down and luncheon served in the saloon on the main deck. The Holly was then turned up stream, and at 5:30 o'clock the party was at the wharf, and half an hour later the Presient was again in the White House,
